Reflections

On The Lake

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Boyd, while on a recent week-end auto tour, enjoyed a visit at Death Valley Scotty's castle.

Boyd expresed his amazement at the likeness of that fabulous showplace to his boyhood idea of a castle. The Boyds intended to make only a few hours' visit, but when the castle keeper was told that Mrs. Boyd was an accomplished organist, she was prevailed upon to play the great organ in the castle.

So pleased were the management and guests with Mrs. Boyd's renditions, that their visit was extended to four days.

Some 18 years ago an ailing T. R. Pearce boarded a train at his home of many years, New York City, and headed for a paradise 3000 miles away in the most southwestern portion of the United States. a wonderful place he had heard of, called Lakeside.

To this day Parce claims that was the wisest move he eevr made. Now, despite a recent hospitalization, he is looking the man-about-town, and is planning development of his real estate in keeping with the new era of development now overshadowing Lakeside.

Pinky Foster seems to have been the only Javelina hunter to return with a catch. The going in Arizona. was rough and few of the elusive pigs were seen.

Members of the Sportsmen's Club are looking for a suitable site for target practice, against a hillside. Practice is under expert supervision and is an educational project. Anyone owning such property and willing toallow the use of firearms, will be doing a great service to the community.

A Texan was discussing real estate in a local office when the earthquake shook the place up. He said, "What's goin' on here, my heads a-wavin' ". "It's an earthquake," said Bill Raper. "Well, rain on that," said the Texan as he bolted for the door!

Ayoung married man with a worried look, wandered about Hofman's department store, looking here and there like a foraging rooster. Harvey offered his assistance and the young man, visibly relieved, confided "My wife sent me here to make a purchase, but I forgot what it is—either a casserole or a camisole. Am I close?" Harvey hesitating, replied, "Yes, tell me, is the bird dead or alive?"

All regular classes for AKC registered dogs, from six month old puppies to older dogs will be held, and an excellent entry list is again expected by the officers of the club.

Who's Kidding Who?

Since 1953 heavily burdened local taxpayers have been laboring under the impression that they have been paying for TWO AQUEDUCT PIPELINES bringing Colorado River water to San Diego, and since the last election, have been threatened with a third pipeline.

The daily press, Jan. 25th, for instance, reveals that a "SECOND aqueduct was proposed yesterday" (Jan. 24. 1956) . . . Fred Heilbron and Richard S. Holmgren, San Diego directors of the Metropolitan Water District attended the meeting.

Little more than a year ago the same daily press, December 12, 1954. printed a story about the break in the SECOND aqueduct barrel, halting San Diego water and quoted Richard S. Holmgren. general manager of the San Diego County Water Authority as saying "The break was not discovered until yesterday morning. Authority officials and Metropolitan District crews shut down the entire aqueduct flow and rushed work necessary to operating the FIRST barrel independently of the damaged SECOND BARREL. NORMALLY THE TWO BARRELS OPERATE TOGETHER." How can the voters vote on a SECOND proposed aqueduct pipeline if the SECOND is already in operation?

Is this a conspiracy on the part of City officials. County officials and the daily press to deliberately deceive the taxpayers at the coming election? Are they so afraid that the proposed bond issues. totaling some 80 millions of dollars they are dreaming up for the coming election will be voted down, that they are trying to cover up the fact that they want a THIRD AQUEDUCT PIPELINE?

To make matters worse, Water officials stated little more than a year ago that we have a 20 year water supply.

San Diego can have COST FREE WATER when the taxpayers are ready to demand that city officials secure it. The Department of the Interior, Washintgon, D. C., issued a printed report more than a year ago, outlining plans and methods of water conversion at $4.08 per acre foot. We are paying $50.00 per acre foot.

The report also states that the conversion process can be COST FREE from the sale of by-products taken in the process. Salt, magnesium, etc. The report also gives plans and operating costs of such a plant. The entire plant to cost ONE MILLION SEVEN HUNDRED FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS. Compare this to our FIRST AQUEDUCT BARRTL at $15 millions; our second aqueduct barrel at $30 millions and a proposed THIRD aqueduct at another $30 millions.

You are now paying on more than $65 and one half millions in bond isues, and you are going to be asked to approve 80 millions more at the coming election. Well, are you?

Growth Of School Dist. Told By Supt., Kneale

Speaking before PTA members last Thursday evening, M. B. Kneale, District Superintendent, disclosed figures on the growth of Lakeside School District.

Pointing out that the figures were conservative, Mr. Kneale said, "In 1946 predictions were that by 1955 420 students would be enrolled in local schools. Today 1,400 children are enrolled, an increase over last per of 16 percent.

"If we continue to grow at today's rate, by September 1, 1961, five years hence,we will have 3,400 children in our schools.

"Taking State requirements and regulations into consideration, by 1960 this district should have seven fully developed school sites. These figures are the result of a survey by a firm of commercial experts.

"We are just starting to grow up. The building survey also predicts 1,928 new homes during the same period."

The statements set forth by Kneale, although conservative, are in line with figures released by County Public Works engineers, who are planning a sewer system for Lakeside that will serve a 40,000 population estimated by 1960.

Nature Talks

The Ocelot is the most beuatiful of all the felines and has a world-wide distribution. Being found in nearly all tropical and semitropical zones.

There are a great many species of this cat ranging in size from 45 to 60 pounds and five feet long down to the little Margays no bigger than a house cat.

All are nocturnal, most hunt in the trees, but there are some that spend most of the time on the ground.

They have been used as pets for centuries by natives of the countries where they abound.

Recently introduced into the United States their popularity is gaining by leaps and bounds and the demand far exceeds the supply.

So far as known they cannot be bred in captivity and the Ocelots now in the U.S. have all been imported. Of the many I have seen the most beautiful are those from India.

Many clubs are springing up all over the country that are devoted entirely to these strikingly gorgeous animals and all are endeavoring to find the secret of being able to raise a litter of kittens in captivity.

Citizen Of The Week

There are many things in this world that we, in our blase everyday life, have a suspicion are worthwhile and good; flowers, trees, birds and other little creatures.

We even suspect that, for the most part, people are good. That suspicion is substantiated in the person of Nelsine Morey, who resides at Vine and Woodside.

Many of Nature's little creatures—cats, dogs, birds even skunks—have reason to thank and love this benefactress.

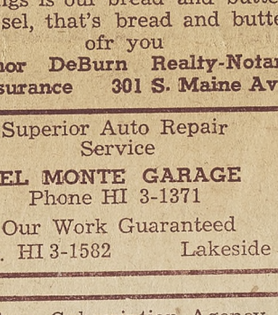

No stray animal is too ugly, sick or hungry to be turned away. She has always shared her limited income with them. She feeds and doctors all breeds in any condition, even takes them to a veterinarian when necessary.

This humane work has not always been too popular with the neighbors because of the large number she cares for.

Time and time again morning finds her completely exhausted from an all-night vigil with a sick animal. Always doing her utmost with her available means, to help some little creature.

Pet lover or not, we feel lucky that there are those with warm hearts and unselfish spirit, who comprise our friendly town. Nelsine Morey, We Salute You!

THE BAFFLES By Mahoney

Your Home
By Frances Ainsworth

I've found what I want for Christmas! It's a wonderful new vacuum cleaner that tops anything I've ever seen for convenience of using and for really getting rooms clean. In fact, I was so enthusiastic after seeing this new cleaner—called the Constellation — that I brought my husband Jim to the store to see it himself the next day!

Features of this new vacuum include, a double-stretch hose which allows you to actually clean an entire 30 foot circle or the entire stairway without moving the machine. Most of us can clean an entire room without once moving the machine. Then there's a new type of telescoping wand with adjustable length, which does away with the nuisance of attaching or removing the shorter two wands usually found. A new throw-away bag is another convenience I like. It has a very large filtering area which means the bag can be used for a longer period of time and your hands never touch dirt when removing or changing bags!

Husband Jim liked the efficiency of the full one horsepower motor which certainly gives the vacuum cleaner powerful suction and makes it "whisk" all the dirt into the bag. I like the quiet operation, and the handsomely finished case, too. Then, too, we both appreciate the fact that this new cleaner is made by The Hoover Company — a name we know we can depend on.

I'm going to be mighty thrilled to find the Constellation under the tree on Christmas morning!

NO ONE BELIEVES the exact, frank truth. Utter candor always falls upon skeptic ears. You can call your boss to his face an old penny grasper, and that old penny grasper not only won't believe it but also won't believe you said it seriously. He will either laugh ironically or remind you gruffly that he has no time for jokes.

Or maybe he's a liberal fellow. Bandy it about and he'll think you're making fun of him or angling for a raise. And you'll never get a raise by shocking him with the naked truth, no matter how flattering. It's too strange.

Tell your wife she's a caviling shrew and that shrew (beg pardon), however startled by your strange utterance, will pay no more attention to your veraciousness than a pelican pays to an individual fish in a school of minnows. But disguise the truth—wrap it in a nasty insinuation—and she will recognize the ghastly facts.

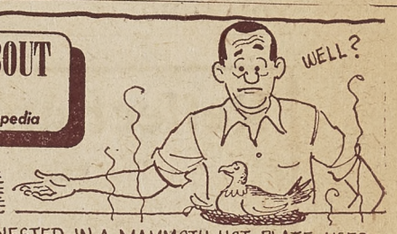

Or maybe she is beautiful and companionable—that fact will mean more to her expressed in clothes and jewelry than it will dressed in stark statement.

Unadorned truth is like a displaced person from a nudist camp. The nudist strolls down the street innocently indifferent to the gaping and catcalling of unbelievers. He (or she), as is truth, is not interested in convincing you of anything or in proving the self-evident. The nudist, as does truth, coincides with the plan or nature and not the deceits of man. And just as there is a place for the nudist, there is a place for the unadorned truth—out of the public view.

That's because the pure truth is too dazzling for our eyes. Like the nudist, it leaves its audience too busy recovering from the shock of its appearance to have much traffic with belief. In fact, polite people generally turn their faces from the naked truth.

Dress it up a little to please some of our vanities, and we credulously clasp it to our bosoms.

Spice Party Layers

Giving a new twist to her newest creation, Ann Pillsbury has given the old flavored spice cake a modern glamor role. Here's how she helps you prepare easily this tasty, different looking, party cake.

Bake Spice Cake Mix as directed on package in two 8 or 9-inch layers. Cool. Whip 2 cups (1 pint) whipping cream with rotary beater until stiff. Blend in ¼ cup sugar and 2 teaspoons vanilla with a few additional turns of the beater. Divide each cooled cake layer into two layers, making four layers in all. Do this by placing heavy sewing thread halfway up side of cake layer. Gently pull thread back and forth in sawing motion to cut through cake.

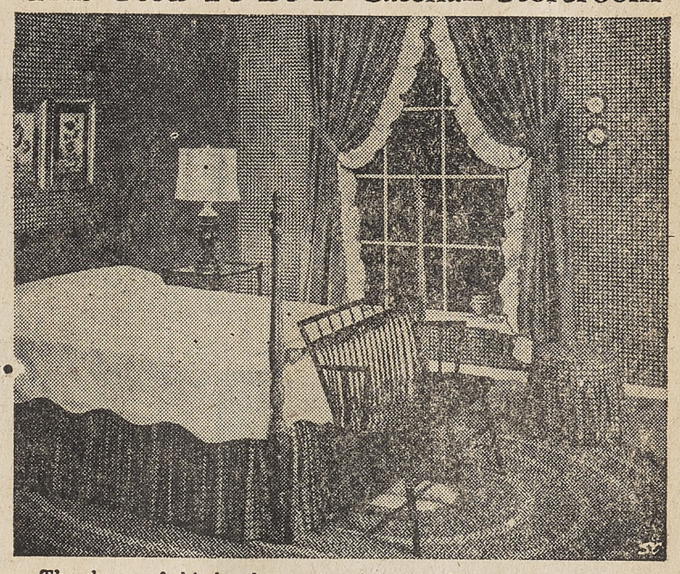

Spread top of each layer with one-fourth of the whipped cream. Then stack layers and decorate top with slivered pecans or other nuts if desired.

This Used To Be A Catchall Storeroom

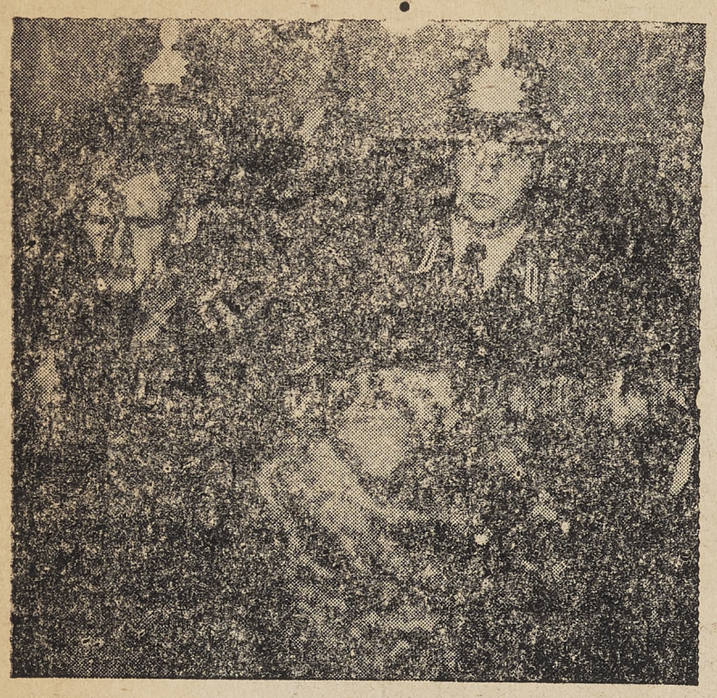

The charm of this lovely guest room is so evident it seems hard to believe that it once was a bleak storeroom. Its welcoming warmth emanates from the harmonious coordination of the matching design of the wall fabric and sailcloth dust ruffle and hassock upholstery with the early American furnishings.

This was not an expensive room to decorate and was done by members of the family. The Wall-Tex fabric wall covering was chosen not only for its happy teaming up with the sailcloth and the furnishings but because it is durable, can be washed frequently with soap and water. Hanging of this 24-inch pre-trimmed wall fabric is easy. It will not tear and with the small images of the provincial Warwick design shown here, there's practically no waste in matching of separate strips on the wall.

Match This For Size

Kids have saved matchcovers for generations. Patricia Foster, 14, of Belleville, N. J., is the newest member of the Empire Matchcover Club and at her first meeting astounded members with the largest and smallest book matches. The large one is 6-inches long and the small one is about the size of a dime. Both contain the usual 20 matches and both do an efficient job. There are about a million hobbyists who save matches and about one-fourth are organized among clubs. Saving matchbook covers is one of the few original American hobbies.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

God as the al-knowing Mind is the central theme of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches Sunday. The Golden Text from Proverbs 2:6, declares, The Lord giveth wisdom; out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding."

Jesus' struggles in the early part of his ministry strengthened Him and made Him confident of God's loving care. In his wilderness experience, when the devil tried to tempt Him, twice he reasoned with the temptor, but the third time He saw that it must be cast out, and said, "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." The Bible account continues, "Then the devil leaveth him, and behold, angles came and ministrede unto Him." (Matt. 4:10,11).

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mary Bakes Eddy writes, "The history of Christianity furnishes sublime proofs of the supporting influence and protecting power bestowed on man by his heavenly Father, omnipotent ,Mind, who gives man faith and understanding whereby to defend himself, not only from temptation, but from bodily suffering, (p. 387).

SUNDOWN ON THE PACIFIC SHORE

A novel about the Great West

BY RENAN PREVOST

Copyright by Renan Prevost, May 1955 All rights reserved

PREFACE

All thru the West there are Ghost Towns. Mostly in the region of the gold mines, of the wild, reckless days of 1849 and after. There are ruins of buildings and etc., which have a story, of the days,- of glory and easy wealth for some men; and dissappointment and tragic passing for other men.

About every city there are happenings of the past which are not always recorded; some men leave great names for their accomplishments, and land marks are named after them such as Parks, Streets and Schools. Also there are men, the workers who have "done the work" who are usually forgotten, with their passing on from this world. This story is about these men of great courage, supreme courage. Many of them arrived here without funds, and so gainful employment was necessary and that was work- hard work. Work not in line with their skill in a trade or profession.

Ghost towns have their story. So stories exist about buildings, water works, factories, railroads and other endeavors concerned with the earning of a livehood. These stories become interesting, because they portray a life during the days of the past,almost forgotten. Great buildings or public utilties are usually known by the name of the man or corporation which caused the construction. Very seldom is any credit given to an architect, or the men who actually did the work. These were the men-"the brains" who were responsible for the erection of the structure or etc. And so this novel is about those "brains" and how they came West and what their life was like.

There are certain things effecting the economic welfare of men, which cause them to migrate. Generally it is promise of better living conditions or opportunities of easy attainment of wealth, thru land booms, new agricultural crops such as rare fruits, a better livable climate,as an aid to regain health;or as in the case of the colonization of this great country- an escape from persecution or oppression.

Men have been traveling to the West for generations, so we travel West with our characters, starting in 1880.

CHAPTER 13

Jerry's First Trip to the Country.
The New England Yarns.
The Stayson Family.
The Founder of the New Town.

"He can't make it run. Guess he just isn't a mechanic enough to run it anymore. There just seems to always be something wrong with the so called 'gallant vehicle."

Let us go and see if we can make it run."

"Yes, Jim, we can try."

"If I can get the proper gasoline-air mixture and the ignition is not in bad order, the auto should run."

So Jim did know something about such conveyances of travel because soon they were on their way, riding in Stayson's pride and joy of new-day travel to the loan office.

So they stopped in front of the place where Stayson office, the little brick building where he reigned supreme.

Julia got off, with Jim's assistance, and then went in to see her father, who was usually the first to speak.

"Why do you come here with that boy, and who said you should ride in that contraption?"

"Why Father, there is no harm done. We have come to ride you home."

"Ride me home? Did you say ride me home?"

"Yes, Jim has the Gas buggy running nicely."she said.

"Don't expect me to ride home with you and that boy. Don't bother me any more now you better go home."

Julia slowly went out of the place, a sorrowfull girl.

"Jim, he refuses to ride with us." said Julia.

"Sure, I know. I have known for a long time what ails him. It's who I am, a saloon keeper's son. That is it."

Two people very much in love and parental objection on the one side which did not help matters any at all.

"Don't feel hurt Jim. I love you, and always will. We will have our day, someday. We are young and a little delay will not be too hard to bear."

"Yes, I know Julia, but my people are good people, morally clean, not poor by a long ways. It is too bad that selling whiskey and operating a winery, and selling the use of other people's money should make so much difference."

"Yes, we can endure hardships of, well, hard feelings, but if we should get married our parents would not all be there. It hurts to have such feelings between parents, especially when there is no need for it." said Jim.

"Let us not talk about it now. There will be a way for us. I know there will be something to change the situation."

The young couple returned to the Stayson home on the 'gallant vehicle' little realizing that would be the last ride for them together for some time.

That night one papa Stayson read the riot act to the Stayson daughters, particularly the oldest.

"And to think you had the unmitigated gall and nerve to come to my office with that boy to 'ride me home.' When are you going to learn what I expect of you?"

Julia did not answer, in fact it appeared that she was not paying much attention to the riot act. Then he said

"Do you hear me, Julia Do you understand me? "

"Yes, Father, I understand."

"See that you change your friends and you are going to a finishing school in San Francisco, where they will teach you to act like a lady and how to choose your friends."

"A finishing school, just me? and why?" she asked

"No not just you, all three of you girls are going."

"A finishing school. What is unfinished about me?"

"You will learn to be a lady, I hope." said the parent.

"The only finish I want is to be married and have my own home. I want a husband who will love me and be a companion. Not a ruler of the roost." asserted Julia.

That remark was surely directed at the reader of the riot act, because his wife had very little to say about the family of one Stayson, or anything about the household.

Don't make any insinuations, young lady." retorted the elder Stayson who then continued, after standing up to make his demand more enforcable. "Now all three of you go to your room upstairs and go to bed."

Old papa Stayson just remained there contemplating what to do about such an unruly daughter. It was very quiet in the Stayson household. A good time for the old man to concentrate. The front window was open a little, and a gentle breeze was blowing in. The only noise was the movement of the window curtains. It was one of those quiet evenings- the breeze came from off the high tide on the ocean. A very gentle breeze of invigorating fresh salt ocean air. How nice and refreshing. Just such an ocean breeze which has made foreign places famous. Would it make some local beach resorts famous some day.That thought had been the hope of many local people.

Then, during the quiet of the evening, all of a sudden that tune came again-'Yankee Doodle'. That boy had been to the Library, and was on the way home, and as usual he was whistling his favorite tune. It was loud and clear- so plain and clear. Just a happy boy, enjoying the boyhood.

Promptly Papa Stayson shut the window: extinguished the drop cord electric light, and retired. Such a day he had.

The Stayson girls were sent to a school for girls, in San Francisco. It was suposed to be a fine place for the education of the young women, of the elite families of the West. A very exclusive school, and so the graduates were expected to show some sort of 'special training'.

Julia and Jim were separated by several hundred miles. That was what Papa Stayson wanted- to get them apart. He did not want his daughter to mary a Saloon keeper's son. Little did he realize that love would find a way to keep young people in communication with each other.

Jim went to work on the farm, that his father had in Otay valley, it was a vinyard and winery. Julia knew that, and so her letters came to Jim there. However, it was one-sidded afair because she could not receive any leters from Jim. She had been told, that her father had asked the school principal to notify him if there was any correspondence of his daughter, with Jim.

One day when she was up-town with another girl; one of her friends, who was there for the same reason; she saw how her friend got letters from her lover. The girl had arranged to have letters come to General Delivery at a sall Post Office, will call department, in her mothe's maiden name. So then and there Julia wrote a letter to Jim and asked him to do likewise. She so much wanted to hear from him. A few weeks later when Julia went to town again there was a leter from Jim. He told her about his love for her and how he missed seeing her. Also about the farm life and what he was learning about the winery. How grand the climate was here. He told her about the 'Parade of Spats' and how dry the whole place was; there having been not much rainfall for quite a long time.

Many of the girls were there at that school because of a 'lover complex'. It was good to know that the school term would some day end. Then she would see her Jim, come what may, even if her father did not like it.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Romance for Bill Williams.
The Priest's Lecture.
A Madam and Her Extra Large Hats.

After supper one evening, Bill asked, "Jerry, would you like to take a walk down town with me?" Then Bill looked at Anna and gave her a sly wink.

"Sure, any time."

Walking up the street, Bill said, "Well, Jerry, I asked Anna to marry me today, so I am going for an engagement ring."

"She is a fine girl. I know that you will be happy.'"

"Hello, Bub," came the coarse greeting from out of a door way.

Bill was surprised, saying, "Well, I'll be darned. It's you again, Madam Fournier."

She was known by her hats, which truly were an extravaganza in the hat world of the ladies.

Today she had on a very large pink straw hat, with a white bird, like a sea gull on the top, with the wings spread out about twenty-four inches. Under the wings and around the crown there were many red roses. What a hat, and how she could balance it on that up-swing pompadour hair-do. A white bird on a red head.

"Yes, Bub, it is me again."

"Well, what do you want?" asked Bill.

"Listen boys. We are friends aren't we? We can do business together. First let me tell you I trust you, but be damn sure you don't betray that trust," so spoke the Madam. "Do you want to make some more money?"

"Sure, we are listening."

"I heard that Old Stayson is moving to his new house on First Street. His old place is for sale, but he will not sell it to me. But that is not going to stop me from geting that place. Here is the deal. I will advance you the money to buy the place. You're to buy it, and furnish it, pretending that you want it for yourself, but before you move in I will buy it from you. I am tired of living on the lower Second Street place. I want to live uptown."

Bill and Jerry were surprised and dumfounded, but asked, "How much will you pay?"

"I will pay five thousand cash," said the Madam.

"Sure, I know you will go to five thousand, because you can make that back quickly from the City Dandies and Gallants. Your Second Street place is not aristocratic enough, not enough class. Gambling business is moving uptown, is that it?"

"What difference does that make to you? You will make some money on the deal. Do you want to make some money?"

"Bill replied, "Sure, I want to make some money, but maybe not that way."

The Madam was getting mad. "And why not? It is a plain busines deal. I have ten one hundred dollar bills here with me. That is one thousand dollars. I will give it to you to bind the bargain," she said.

"Make it seven thousand, and I will take your deal. but I want the cash balance before you move in," said Bill

"You drive a hard bargain, don't you? But I will take it," said the Madam.

Again going into the door hallway out of sight, and procuring the money, as he had before.

Coming to Bill she said, "Remember now, that I trust you. Don't pull any fast tricks if you want to live a long, healthy life."

"O. K. Meet me in the doorway of the Title Co. one week from tonight and I will tell you of what results I have. Maybe Old Stayson will not sell to me."

"All right, Bub. Goodnight."

Then the boys proceeded up the street, to the jewelers.

Jerry asked, "Don't you think it is kind of risky carrying all that money with you?"

Bill replied, "Oh no. I am just a second hand furniture dealer making a bare existence. Here is where we buy the ring."

Bill purchased the ring for $60.00, then the boys returned home. Arriving up the stairs, the girls were reading and their father was just resting.

"Mr. Marcus," spoke up Bill, "I would like to marry your daughter, Anna. I have an engagement ring, with your kind permission may I present it to her? She has agreed.'"

"Yes, Son. I am happy to know my daughter is going to be your wife. Anna. do you love Bill and will you take him for better or worse?"

"Yes, Father, I do love him," said Anna.

"Anna, I hope you will always wear this ring with great pleasure," extended Bill.

"Oh, thank you, Bill." Then she planted a kiss on his lips that was a real "smacker."

Dora was looking at Jerry, who was interested, but unable to do likewise.

"If you folks will excuse me, I think that I will retire. Goodnight, all," said Mr. Marcus.

"How about a few games of cards?" suggested Bill.

The foursome, now destined to be relatives, were pursuing one of the American pastimes cards.

2nd ANNUAL PRESENTATION

SERAFINA

with additional numbers by
H. Adair Thomas

LOVE - INTRIGUE - COMEDY

A first rate tourist attraction must be original, entertaining, enjoyable and it must be seen only in one place Tourists travel the world over to see unusual attractions. "Serafina" and "Stars in the West" can be annual attractions for San Diego. There has never been anything offered in San Diego, to compare with the possibilties of these Historical Operettas, excepting, the two great Expositions -1915 and 1935, in our wonderful Balboa Park.

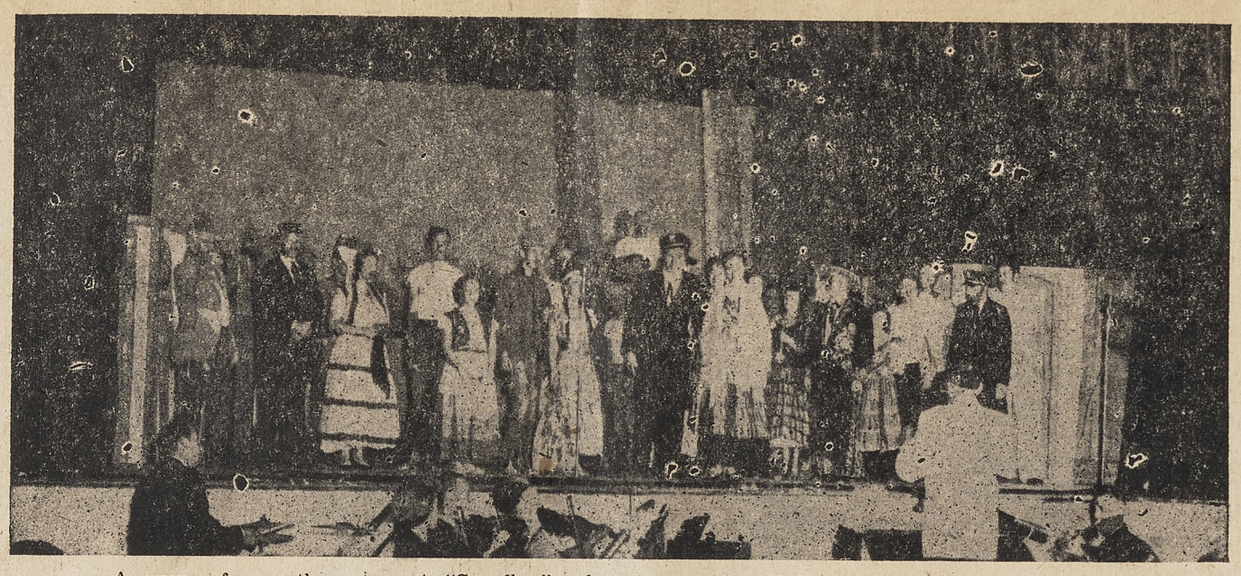

Why we offer these Operettas - The presentation of stage shows and etc., which have been produced for years, elsewhere, does not create prime tourist attractions of merit, for San Diego. Because as a rule tourists do not travel far to see stage shows; which can be seen at home or nearby. Or to hear music which is regularly used on the radio or on records for home playing. All of which; although, said shows and music are acceptable for amusement; but, they are in reality "common stuff" and seldom attract the well informed and enlightened tourist, seeking the unusual.

A tourist attaction of supreme merit is the Historical Operetta. And produced annually in a Civic Theatre located admist the fine buildings of Balboa Park, which is world famous and the center of culture of San Diego. We have the Russ Auditorium which will suffice until a Civic Theatre can be provided, We have the talent and the most enjoyable operetta — "SERAFINA"

These Operettas are new, with appeal unlike the over-played stage presentations of the past years. So,- We offer these original Operettas, they can be tourist attractions unsurpassed; because they have not been produced elsewhere, most of the music has not been published, or offered for public use. Here are two historical Operettas, in all that it implies, about our San Diego.

The historical facts presented in the Operettas are such as has never heretofore been presented. Participation is available for Patrons and Sponsors send communications to -
